DEPARTMENT OF THE CLASSICS

Overview of Concentrations, Joint Concentrations, Secondary Field, and Language Citations
WHO WE ARE

For more than a century the Department of the Classics at Harvard University has been at the forefront of research on the cultures of ancient Greece and Rome. We encourage students to explore the whole range of Greco-Roman civilization, from the Bronze Age through Byzantium and medieval Europe to modern Greece. Our faculty provide instruction in all the major areas of classical studies, including language and literature, history, the history of art and archaeology, philosophy, reception studies, and the history of science.

OUR STUDENTS

Our students become familiar with at least one ancient language, develop unparalleled analytical skills, and acquire an appreciation of two of the civilizations that have most shaped the modern world.

We welcome students who have no prior knowledge of either Greek or Latin. In accordance with our conviction that Classics intersects in fundamental ways with many academic fields, we also welcome joint concentrations. Our students have gone on to successful careers in law, medicine, business, journalism, divinity, the arts, and much else.
CONCENTRATIONS IN THE CLASSICS

We offer two tracks for Classics as a Concentration: Classical Languages and Literatures, and Classical Civilizations.

CLASSICAL LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES

Basic requirements: 12 courses

Six courses in Greek and/or Latin. At least two of these must be numbered 100 or above and at least one must be a course in the history of Greek or Latin literature, numbered 112a or 112b (or equivalent in the case of Byzantine/Modern Greek and Medieval Latin).

Two courses providing a broad introduction to Classical civilization, normally Classical Studies 97a and 97b.

Classics 98, a small-group tutorial emphasizing the development of research skills (must be taken for a letter-grade).

Three additional courses from among those listed under Classics at courses.my.harvard.edu, including cross-listed courses.

Additional requirements for Honors: Senior thesis, together with two semesters of the senior tutorial (Classics 99).

CLASSICAL CIVILIZATIONS

Basic requirements: 12 courses

Four courses in Greek and/or Latin

Two courses providing a broad introduction to Classical civilization, normally Classical Studies 97a and 97b.

Classics 98, a small-group tutorial emphasizing the development of research skills (must be taken for a letter-grade).

Classical Studies 112 (Regional Study)

Four additional courses from among those listed under Classics at courses.my.harvard.edu, including cross-listed courses.

Additional requirements for Honors: Senior thesis, together with two semesters of the senior tutorial (Classics 99).

To qualify for a Secondary Field in Classical Civilizations, students need to take five courses relating to the Greek and Roman worlds. Courses conducted entirely in English, as well as courses in the languages taught in the Department of the Classics, may count toward the Secondary Field.

Requirements:

Classical Studies 97a or 97b

Four additional courses from among those listed under Classics at courses.my.harvard.edu, including cross-listed courses.

No more than two courses or one full course from the introductory language sequence in Modern Greek may count toward the Secondary Field.

One course may be taken Pass/Fail.

Students interested in pursuing a Secondary Field in Classical Civilizations should contact the Director of Undergraduate Studies.

A Language Citation may be earned by taking four courses in a single language above the first-year level. Students interested in pursuing a Citation should contact the Preceptor.

CITATION IN LATIN

Requirements: Four courses chosen from the following: Latin 2x, 3, 10, or any 100-level Latin course, including those in Medieval Latin. At least two of the courses must be 100-level.

CITATION IN GREEK

Requirements: Four courses chosen from the following: Greek 2x, 3, 10, or any 100-level Greek course, including those in Byzantine Greek. At least two of the courses must be 100-level.

CITATION IN MODERN GREEK

Requirements: Four courses (or equivalent) chosen from the following: Modern Greek B (a full course), or any 100-level course in which the reading is done in modern Greek.

Other advanced courses or those taken out of residence for Harvard degree credit may be substituted for one or more of the required courses for each Language Citation with the permission of the Preceptor.
