WHO WE ARE

For more than a century the Department of the Classics at Harvard University has been at the forefront of research on the cultures of ancient Greece and Rome. We encourage students to explore the whole range of Greco-Roman civilization, from the Bronze Age through Byzantium and medieval Europe to modern Greece. Our faculty provide instruction in all the major areas of classical studies, including language and literature, history, the history of art and archaeology, philosophy, reception studies, and the history of science. Our students become familiar with at least one ancient language, develop unparalleled analytical skills, and acquire an appreciation of two of the civilizations that have most shaped the modern world.

We welcome students who have no prior knowledge of either Greek or Latin. In accordance with our conviction that Classics lies at the root of many important academic fields, we also welcome joint concentrations. Our students have gone on to successful careers in law, medicine, business, journalism, divinity, the arts, and much else.
CONCENTRATIONS IN THE CLASSICS

We offer two tracks for Classics as a Concentration: Classical Languages and Literatures, and Classical Civilizations.

CLASSICAL LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES

Basic requirements: 12 half-courses

Six half-courses in Greek and/or Latin. At least two of these must be numbered 100 or above (H and K are considered 100-level), and at least one must be a course in the history of Greek or Latin literature, numbered 112a or 112b (or equivalent in the case of Byzantine/Modern Greek and Medieval Latin).

Two half-courses providing a broad introduction to Classical civilization, normally Classical Studies 97a and 97b.

Classics 98, a small-group tutorial emphasizing the development of research skills (must be taken for a letter-grade).

Three additional half-courses from among those listed under Classics at courses.my.harvard.edu, including cross-listed courses.

Additional requirements for Honors: EITHER a senior thesis, together with two semesters of the senior tutorial (Classics 99) OR two additional half-courses in Greek or Latin, both of which must normally be letter-graded with a grade of A- or better, and at least one of which must be a course in prose composition (H or K).

CLASSICAL CIVILIZATIONS

Basic requirements: 12 half-courses

Four half-courses in Greek and/or Latin

Two half-courses providing a broad introduction to Classical civilization, normally Classical Studies 97a and 97b.

Classics 98, a small-group tutorial emphasizing the development of research skills (must be taken for a letter-grade).

Classical Studies 112 (Regional Study)

Four additional half-courses from among those listed under Classics at courses.my.harvard.edu, including cross-listed courses.

Additional requirements for Honors: Senior thesis, together with two semesters of the senior tutorial (Classics 99).
